- The customer decides to register for the newsletter via the Rudy Games website. In this case the registration is being done with double-opt-in. This requires an e-mail to be sent to the customer after registration to confirm the registration, in order to avoid registration of e-mail addresses that are not valid or confirmed.

A separate cancellation of the newsletter and statistical analysis is unfortunately not possible. A link to unsubscribe from Rudy Games newsletters will be at the end of every newsletter

Usage of e-mail information system „Sendinblue“

E-mail newsletters from Rudy Games are being sent by “Sendinblue”, an e-mail distribution platform by the French company Sendinblue SAS, 55 Rue d’Amsterdam, 75008 Paris, France.

The email-addresses of all Rudy Games newsletter subscribers as well as additional data as described in this document will be stored on servers owned by Sendinblue. We strongly trust the reliability and the safety of data and the IT infrastructure from Sendinblue.

The privacy policy of Sendinblue can be found here:
<https://www.sendinblue.com/legal/privacypolicy/>

Statistical data analysis

Newsletters contain a so called “Tracking Pixel” which allows statistical analysis. This “Tracking Pixel” allows to track technical information such as Browser version, IP address and the point in time the document was opened. This information is being used to improve the system and service based on technical data or user groups, by looking how often/how long, where (location guess based on IP-address) and when an e-mail is being read.

Part of the statistical analysis is the detection of whether an e-mail has been read, opened and whether a link was clicked in the e-mail. Technically this information can be correlated to a unique user, but it is neither Rudy Games nor Sendinblue’s intention to track the behavior of individual users. The analysis simply helps Rudy Games understand the reading patterns of its users and to understand whether certain topics in certain e-mails are more or less interesting to our users.

7.2 Push notifications and WhatsApp messages

Notifications and messages will be related to Rudy Games Products (e.g. Energy re-charged, new turn, ...) or information about new features, products or special offers.
